One morning, Grandpa woke Chen Yu up very early. "Let's go fishing," he said with a warm smile. Chen Yu rubbed his sleepy eyes but 2 got out of bed. They walked along a narrow path to a small river behind the village.

Grandpa showed Chen Yu how to hold the rod and throw the line into the water. "Fishing needs 3," Grandpa said. "You can't rush it." Chen Yu nodded, but after twenty minutes of waiting, he started to feel 4. Nothing was biting. He wanted to give up and go home to play video games.

"Grandpa, this is so boring. There are no fish here," Chen Yu 5.

Grandpa laughed softly. "The fish are there. They're just not ready yet. In life, many good things take time. If you leave now, you'll never know what you 6."

Chen Yu looked at his grandfather's calm face and decided to stay. He sat quietly, watching the water and 7 to the birds singing in the trees. Slowly, he began to feel peaceful.

"See?" Grandpa said, putting his hand on Chen Yu's shoulder. "Good things come to those who 9."
