中考英语完形填空：妈妈的花店

完形填空原文

My mom owned a small flower shop on a quiet street. The shop was not big, but it was full of colors and sweet 1. I often helped her after school, wrapping bouquets and watering the plants.

Business was never great. A large flower chain store opened across the street last year, and many of our old customers started shopping there 2. The chain store had lower prices, more varieties, and even a delivery service. Mom's little shop couldn't compete.

One evening, I found Mom sitting behind the counter, looking 3. "Maybe I should close the shop," she said quietly. "Nobody comes here anymore."

I didn't know what to say. I loved the shop. It felt like a second 4 to me. But I could see how hard things had become.

The next day at school, I told my friend Xiao Mei about the problem. She thought for a moment and said, "What if your mom does something the big store 5? Something personal and special?"

That gave me an idea. I went home and suggested to Mom that she start teaching flower-arranging classes on weekends. "You're the best at making bouquets," I said. "Why not 6 that skill with others?"

Mom was unsure at first, but she agreed to try. We made posters and put them up around the neighborhood. The first class had only four people. But they loved it. Mom taught them how to pick the right flowers, match 7, and create arrangements for different occasions.

Word spread quickly. By the second month, every weekend class was 8. Some students even started ordering custom bouquets from Mom's shop instead of buying from the chain store.

Slowly, business improved. The shop was lively again, filled with laughter and the sound of people learning something new. Mom smiled more than she had in 9.

"You know what saved this shop?" she said to me one evening. "It wasn't a big idea or a lot of money. It was the thing that the big store doesn't have — a personal 10."
