中考英语完形填空：操场上的蒲公英

完形填空原文

Our school playground had a problem. Every spring, hundreds of dandelions grew between the cracks of the old running track. The school groundskeeper, Uncle Li, spent hours every week pulling them out. But they always grew 1.

Most students thought the dandelions were ugly weeds. "They ruin the playground," someone said during a class meeting. Our head teacher, Ms. Gao, nodded and was about to agree when a quiet girl named Zhou Xin 2 her hand.

"Actually," Zhou Xin said softly, "dandelions are not just weeds. They are one of the first flowers to bloom in spring, and bees 3 on them for food. Without them, the bees would have nothing to eat."

The class fell 4. Nobody had thought about it that way before.

Zhou Xin continued, "What if, instead of pulling them out, we set aside a small 5 of the playground just for wildflowers? We could plant more types, and it could become a mini garden for insects."

Ms. Gao looked at Zhou Xin with interest. "That's a very 6 idea," she said. "Let's bring it to the school meeting."

To everyone's surprise, the principal loved the plan. The school agreed to turn a corner of the playground into a wildflower zone. Zhou Xin led a group of volunteers to plant seeds — not just dandelions, but also clover, wild daisies, and other native flowers.

By late April, the small corner was alive with color. Butterflies and bees visited every day. A science teacher even used it as an outdoor 7 for teaching about ecosystems.

The best part was the change in attitude. Students who had once called dandelions ugly now 8 to visit the wildflower zone during break. Some brought magnifying glasses to observe the tiny insects up close.

"Zhou Xin taught us something 9," Ms. Gao said at the end-of-term assembly. "Before judging something as useless, we should try to 10 it first. Every living thing has its value."
