中考英语完形填空：食堂里的温暖

完形填空原文

Lunch at our school canteen was always crowded. Students rushed in as soon as the bell rang, pushing toward the counter to buy food. Finding a seat was the hardest part. If you were late, you had to eat standing up or wait for someone to 1.

One Tuesday, I was the last to finish my homework. By the time I got to the canteen, every table was full. I stood there with my tray, looking for a place to sit. I felt a tap on my shoulder. A boy from Grade 8 — I didn't know his name — pointed to an empty chair at his table. "You can sit 2," he said.

I was grateful. I sat down and ate in silence. Before I left, I said "Thank you." He smiled. "No problem. I've been there before."

The next week, I finished class early. I got to the canteen while there were still many 3 seats. I sat down and started eating. Then I saw a younger student — probably from Grade 7 — holding a tray and looking around. He seemed lost. I remembered how I had felt the week before. I 4 my hand and waved at him. "There's space here!"

He came over with a relieved smile. "Thank you! I thought I'd have to eat standing up."

We had a nice chat. His name was Zhang Wei. He was new to the school and didn't have many friends yet. I told him about the boy who had helped me. "Maybe we should both do that — help others find seats when we have 5," I said.

Zhang Wei agreed. From then on, whenever we had empty chairs at our table, we would look for students who were standing with their trays. A nod, a wave, or a simple "Come sit here" — it didn't take much 6, but it made a difference.

One day, our head teacher noticed what we were doing. She said in the next class meeting, "I've seen some students 7 others find seats in the canteen. That's a small act of kindness that makes our school a better place. Let's all try to do the same."

Slowly, more students began to offer seats. The canteen became a friendlier place. People talked to each other more. New students felt more welcome.

I never learned the name of the boy who first gave me his chair. But his kindness 8 me. It taught me that helping others doesn't require grand gestures. Sometimes, the simplest thing — like offering a seat — can make someone's day and 9 a chain of goodwill. I hope that chain never 10.
