中考英语完形填空：黑板上的感谢

完形填空原文

Mr. Zhang was our Chinese teacher for three years. He was strict but fair. He never gave up on any student, no matter how 1 they were in the subject. I was one of the students who struggled. I found Chinese boring and often failed the exams. Mr. Zhang noticed. He started to stay after class to help me. He didn't scold me. Instead, he asked what I found difficult and worked with me step by step.

Slowly, my grades improved. By the end of Grade 9, I had gone from the bottom of the class to the top ten. I wanted to 2 Mr. Zhang, but I was too shy to say it out loud.

Our last day of junior high was coming. Many students were planning to give gifts to their teachers. I didn't have much money for an expensive present. I thought about what I could do.

That night, I had an idea. I would write something on the blackboard — a message for Mr. Zhang. The next morning, I came to school very 3. The classroom was empty. I picked up a piece of chalk and wrote in big letters: "Thank you, Mr. Zhang. You believed in me when I didn't believe in myself."

I didn't sign my name. I wanted it to be a 4 from all of us who had been helped by him. Then I left quietly.

When the bell rang and students came in, someone saw the words and called out, "Look at the blackboard!" Everyone turned to look. Mr. Zhang walked in. He 5 at the blackboard for a long time. I saw his eyes turn red. He cleared his throat and said, "I don't know who wrote this. But thank you. This is the best gift I've ever 6."

He didn't erase the words. They stayed on the blackboard the whole day. Other students started to add their own messages. "Thank you for your patience." "You made Chinese interesting." "We will miss you." By the afternoon, the blackboard was full of gratitude.

At the end of the day, Mr. Zhang took a photo of the blackboard. "I will keep this 7," he said. "It reminds me why I chose to be a teacher."

That experience taught me something important. Saying thank you doesn't need to be grand or expensive. Sometimes, a few honest words can mean more than any 8. And the best time to express gratitude is 9 — before it's too late. I'm glad I wrote those words. I'm glad Mr. Zhang knew how much he had 10 to our lives.
