中考英语完形填空：捡到的钱包

完形填空原文

On my way home from school last Tuesday, I found a brown wallet lying on the sidewalk. I 1 it up and opened it. Inside were about 500 yuan, a bus card, and an ID card with a photo of an elderly woman.

I didn't know what to do at first. My friend suggested I keep the money and throw the wallet away. "Nobody will ever 2," he said. But something in my heart told me that was wrong.

I decided to take the wallet to the nearest police station. The officer there was kind. He 3 the ID card and said he would try to find the owner. "You did the right thing," he told me with a smile.

Two days later, my mother received a phone call. It was from the woman who had lost the wallet. She wanted to meet me and say thank you in person.

We met at a small café. The woman, Mrs. Wang, was over sixty years old. She held my hands with 4 and said, "Thank you, young man. That money was for my granddaughter's birthday gift. You have a kind heart."

She insisted on giving me 50 yuan as a reward. I refused at first, but she said, "Please 5 it. It's not for the money you returned — it's for the honesty you showed."

That day I learned something important. Being honest is not always easy. Sometimes it 6 us to go against what others suggest. But doing the right thing always makes us feel good about ourselves.

Mrs. Wang and I became friends. She sometimes sends me messages to ask about my studies. Her 7 reminds me that small acts of kindness can create lasting connections.

I still walk past that sidewalk sometimes. Every time I do, I remember the wallet and the choice I made. I'm 8 I chose to do the right thing. That decision changed not only Mrs. Wang's day but also the way I see myself.

Honesty is like a seed. When you plant it, it grows into something beautiful. The wallet I found that day was 9, but the lesson it taught me was priceless. I hope that whenever you face a similar situation, you will make the same choice — to be honest and 10 others as you would want to be treated.
