中考英语完形填空：废旧纸箱的旅行

完形填空原文

Last month, our school held a recycling project. Each class had to collect used cardboard boxes and turn them into something useful. My class decided to make a small library corner.

We gathered boxes from our homes and the school cafeteria. At first, the boxes looked old and 1. Nobody believed we could make something beautiful from them.

Our teacher, Mr. Chen, showed us how to cut, fold, and paint the boxes. "Every 2 thing can become useful again if we use our imagination," he said. We worked in groups. Some students cut the boxes into shelves. Others painted them with bright colors and simple patterns.

I was in charge of painting. I chose blue and green — the colors of the sky and grass. As I painted, I started to 3 the boxes differently. They weren't just trash anymore. They were becoming something that could hold books and bring joy to our classroom.

After three days of hard work, our library corner was ready. We placed it near the window where there was plenty of 4. The shelves held over two hundred books that students had brought from home. Everyone was proud of what we had created.

The best part came later. A first-grade student walked into our classroom, saw the colorful shelves, and said with a wide smile, "Wow! Did you really make this from 5 boxes? That's amazing!" Her words made us feel that all our effort was worth it.

Our library corner became the most popular spot in the classroom. During breaks, students would 6 around it, choosing books to read. Even students who didn't like reading before started to borrow books. The old boxes had brought us something special — a love for reading.

I learned an important lesson from this project. We often throw away things without thinking. But with a little creativity and 7, we can give them a new life. The cardboard boxes had completed a wonderful journey — from trash to treasure.

Now when I see empty boxes or other "waste" at home, I always ask myself: "Can I use this for something 8?" Sometimes the answer is yes. A small change in our habits can make a big difference to our planet.

The recycling project didn't just change our classroom. It changed the way we 9 things. Nothing is truly worthless if we're willing to see its hidden value. That's the message those old cardboard boxes taught us — and it's a lesson we'll 10 for a long time.
