中考英语完形填空：爸爸的出租车

完形填空原文

My father has been a taxi driver for fifteen years. He works from early morning until late at night. When I was younger, I felt a bit 1 when my classmates talked about their fathers' jobs. "My dad is a manager." "My dad works in an office." I never said much about my father's job.

One rainy evening, Dad came home later than usual. He looked tired. "There was an old lady at the train station," he said. "She had no umbrella and didn't know how to get home. I drove her for free." Mom smiled and said, "That's just like you."

I started to pay more 2 to the stories Dad told at dinner. He had helped a lost child find his parents. He had driven a sick woman to the hospital in the middle of the night. He had given free rides to students who couldn't afford the fare. My father didn't earn much, but he had a 3 heart.

One day, I went with Dad to work. I sat in the back and watched him drive. He was always polite to passengers. He helped an elderly man with his bags. He gave directions to a tourist who didn't speak Chinese well. When we stopped for lunch, Dad shared his food with a homeless man sitting near the restaurant.

"Dad," I asked, "why do you help so many people? You work so hard already."

He thought for a moment. "When I drive, I meet many people. Some are happy, some are sad. If I can 4 their day a little better, why not? A taxi is not just for going from one place to another. It can be a place where people feel a bit of 5 on a difficult day."

His words stayed with me. I began to understand that a job is not only about money or title. It's about how we 6 others. My father might drive a taxi, but he drives it with kindness and care. That makes him a great man in my eyes.

Last month, a woman came to our door. She said she was the mother of the child Dad had helped years ago. She had spent a long time 7 our address. She wanted to thank Dad in person and brought a small gift. Dad refused the gift but was clearly moved. "I just did what anyone would do," he said.

Now when my classmates ask about my father's job, I say with pride, "My dad drives a taxi. He helps people every day. I think he has the most 8 job in the world."

I have learned from my father that we can find meaning in any work if we do it with love. The taxi he drives is old and simple. But the warmth he brings to his passengers makes it something 9. It's not just a car — it's a place where strangers can feel a little less alone in a big city.

Thank you, Dad, for teaching me that the best way to succeed in life is not to climb the highest, but to lift others 10 as we go.
