中考英语完形填空：笔友的礼物

完形填空原文

Two years ago, I joined a pen pal program at school. I was matched with Emma, a girl from Australia. We started writing letters to each other. At first, our letters were short and simple — we talked about our schools, our hobbies, and the weather. 1, our friendship grew. We shared our dreams, our worries, and our favorite books.

Emma always drew small pictures at the bottom of her letters. Sometimes it was a kangaroo, sometimes a koala. I looked forward to every letter, wondering what 2 she would draw next.

Last month, Emma wrote that she was sending me a gift. "It's something from my country," she said. "I hope you'll like it." I was so 3. I had never received a gift from someone so far away.

The package arrived three weeks later. It was a flat box, not too heavy. I opened it carefully. Inside was a beautiful scarf with patterns of Australian flowers and a note. The note said: "Friendship knows no distance. Thank you for being my friend. — Emma"

I held the scarf and felt my eyes get wet. Emma and I had never met. We lived in different countries and spoke different 4 languages. Yet she had taken the time to choose a gift, pack it, and send it across the ocean. That meant more to me than the scarf itself.

I wore the scarf to school the next day. When my classmates asked where I got it, I told them about Emma. "You have a pen pal in Australia? That's so cool!" they said. I realized that the scarf was not just a piece of cloth. It was a 5 of a friendship that had crossed thousands of kilometers.

I decided to send Emma something in return. I thought about what would represent my country and my gratitude. I chose a Chinese knot — a traditional symbol of good luck and connection. I wrapped it carefully and wrote a long letter to 6 my thanks.

A few weeks later, Emma wrote back. She loved the knot and had hung it in her room. "Every time I see it," she wrote, "I remember that I have a friend on the other side of the world. It makes me feel less 7."

Her words made me understand something important. In a world that sometimes feels divided, small gestures like gifts and letters can build bridges. We don't need to meet in person to be 8. We just need to care and show that we do.

The scarf now sits on my shelf. I don't wear it every day — I want to keep it special. But whenever I feel lonely or doubtful about the world, I look at it and remember Emma's note: "Friendship knows no distance." It reminds me that kindness can travel 9 any border, and that a girl in Australia and a girl in China can be true friends.

I hope to meet Emma one day. Until then, we will keep writing. And I will always be 10 for the gift she sent — not because of what it was, but because of what it meant. It was a reminder that we are never alone as long as we reach out to others.
