中考英语完形填空：姐姐的毕业典礼

完形填空原文

My elder sister graduated from high school last June. The whole family went to attend her graduation ceremony. It was a hot day, but the stadium was full of proud parents and excited students.

I sat in the crowd and watched. When my sister's name was called, she walked onto the stage. She received her diploma and shook the principal's hand. Her face was full of 1. I had never seen her look so happy.

I thought about all the years we had spent together. When I was little, she used to help me with my homework. When I was sad, she would 2 me. She had always been there for me. Now she was leaving for university in another city. I would 3 her very much.

During the ceremony, the headmaster gave a speech. He said, "Graduation is not an end. It is the beginning of a new 4. I hope you will always remember where you came from and the people who supported you."

His words made me think. My sister had worked hard for twelve years. She had stayed up late before exams. She had given up weekends to study. All her 5 had paid off.

After the ceremony, we took photos. My sister put her arm around my shoulder and said, "Your turn will come soon. Study hard, and don't give up when things get 6."

I nodded. "I will. And I'll come to your university to visit you."

She smiled. "I'd like that. We'll always be 7, no matter how far apart we are."

That day, I learned something important. Growing up means that people we love sometimes leave. But the love and memories we share never 8. We carry them with us wherever we go.

My sister left for university in September. I video-call her every weekend. She tells me about her new life, and I tell her about school. Distance has not changed our 9. We are still close.

Graduation is a time to celebrate, but it is also a time to say thank you. I am grateful for my sister — for her love, her patience, and the 10 she has given me. I will work hard so that one day I can make her proud too.
