中考英语完形填空：一场特殊的家长会

完形填空原文

Last term, our school held a different kind of parent-teacher meeting. Instead of talking about grades, the teachers asked parents and students to sit together and 1 each other a letter.

"Write what you've never had the courage to say," our head teacher, Ms. Chen, said. The classroom fell silent. I looked at my mother. She was looking at me too. We both had tears in our eyes before we even started 2.

I wrote: "Mom, I know you work hard for our family. Sometimes I'm too tired to help with housework. I'm sorry. I love you." My hand was shaking as I 3 the paper to her. She read it and hugged me tightly. "I'm sorry too," she said. "I sometimes push you too hard because I want the best for you. I forget you're still a child who needs rest."

Mom's letter to me said: "You are my pride. I don't say it often, but I see how hard you try. Even when you fail, you never give up. I'm 4 of you." I had never heard her say those words. I always thought she only cared about my scores.

Around the classroom, I saw other families having similar moments. A father who was always busy finally told his son, "I'm sorry I missed your basketball games." A girl read to her mother, "Thank you for 5 me when I was sad." There were hugs, tears, and smiles everywhere.

Ms. Chen said at the end, "Today we didn't talk about grades or rankings. We talked about something more 6 — love and understanding. Sometimes we forget to express our feelings. This meeting is a reminder that our families need our words, not just our actions."

That parent-teacher meeting changed the way I communicate with my mother. We now have a "weekly chat" every Sunday. We talk about not only school but also our feelings. Our 7 has become much closer.

I learned that love needs to be spoken. Don't assume your family knows how you feel. 8 them. Tell them you appreciate them. A simple "thank you" or "I love you" can 9 a relationship.

I still keep the letters from that day in my drawer. Whenever I feel distant from my family, I read them again. They remind me of that special afternoon when we finally 10 our hearts to each other.
