中考英语完形填空：社区回收日

完形填空原文

Last spring, our school organized a community recycling day. Each class had to 1 recyclable materials from the neighborhood and sort them at school. My class was given the streets closest to the school.

At first, nobody was 2 about the project. "It's just picking up trash," said my classmate Wang Lei. "What's the point?" Most of us felt the same way. We would rather have stayed in the classroom.

On Saturday morning, we split into groups and went door to door. I knocked on Mrs. Zhao's door first. She was an elderly woman who lived 3. When I explained what we were doing, her face lit up. "Wait here," she said, and came back with three bags full of old newspapers and plastic bottles. "I've been 4 to get rid of these for months," she said. "Thank you so much!"

Her reaction surprised me. I had expected people to be 5 at us for disturbing their weekend. Instead, most neighbors were happy to help. Some even invited us in for water and snacks.

By noon, we had collected so much material that we needed to make several 6 back to school. Old clothes, glass bottles, cardboard boxes, and electronic waste filled the classroom. Sorting everything took the whole afternoon.

During the sorting, I learned things I never knew. For example, different types of plastic need to be recycled 7. Batteries must be handled with special care because they contain harmful chemicals.

Our teacher told us that the materials we collected would be sent to recycling factories. The 8 from selling them would be donated to a children's charity.

At the end of the day, I was tired but 9. We had helped clean up the neighborhood, learned about recycling, and raised money for children in need — all in one day.

Wang Lei, who had complained the loudest that morning, said on the way home, "Actually, that was pretty 10. Can we do it again next month?"
