中考英语完形填空：夏令营的第一夜

完形填空原文

I had never been away from home for more than one night. So when my parents signed me up for a week-long summer camp, I was 1. What if I didn't like the food? What if the other kids were mean? What if I couldn't fall asleep?

The bus ride to the camp took three hours. I sat by the window, clutching my backpack and staring at the passing trees. The girl sitting next to me was called Xiao Wen. She tried to start a conversation, but I was too 2 to talk.

When we arrived, the camp looked nothing like I had imagined. It was in the mountains, surrounded by tall pine trees. The air smelled fresh, and I could hear a stream 3 somewhere nearby. For a moment, I forgot about being scared.

Our cabins were small but 4. Each one had four bunk beds. I got the top bunk. When I climbed up, my bag fell and landed on the head of the girl below me. It was Xiao Wen again. She burst out laughing, and this time, I laughed too.

After dinner, the camp leader organized a bonfire. We sat in a circle and introduced ourselves. When my 5 came, my voice shook. "Hi, I'm Li Fang. I'm from Guangzhou. I've never been to a camp before." To my surprise, several other kids said the same thing. I wasn't the only 6 one.

That night, as I lay in my bunk staring at the wooden ceiling, I couldn't sleep. The forest sounds were strange and 7 — owls hooting, branches creaking, and something rustling in the bushes outside.

"Are you awake?" whispered Xiao Wen from below.

"Yes," I whispered back.

"Me too. I'm a little scared."

"Me too," I admitted.

We talked in whispers for almost an hour — about school, about our families, about what we wanted to be when we grew up. 8 I knew it, my eyes were getting heavy.

I woke up to sunlight streaming through the window and birds singing outside. Xiao Wen was already up, sitting on her bed and 9.

"Good morning, roommate," she said cheerfully.

I smiled. The night had seemed so long and frightening, but here in the morning light, everything felt 10. And I realized that having someone to share your fears with makes them only half as big.
