中考英语完形填空：同桌的橡皮

完形填空原文

Wang Lei has been my deskmate since Grade 7. We are good friends, but we often argue about small things. One day, I lost my eraser before a math exam. I looked everywhere but couldn't 1 it. I was very worried because I needed it for the test.

"Here, use mine," Wang Lei said, pushing his eraser toward me. It was half-used and a little dirty, but I was 2 to have it. "Thanks. I'll return it after the exam," I said. He nodded and said, "No hurry. 3 it."

During the exam, I used his eraser many times. When the exam was over, I realized I had forgotten to 4 it before handing in my paper. I looked at Wang Lei. He was packing his things and didn't seem to 5. I walked over and returned the eraser. "Sorry for keeping it so long," I said. He smiled. "It's just an eraser. Don't worry about it."

That day, I understood something. True friendship is not about expensive gifts. It's about being there when someone 6 you. A small eraser reminded me that Wang Lei was a real friend. From then on, I tried to be more 7 to him. When he needed help with English, I would 8 my time to explain. We became even closer. Sometimes the smallest things can 9 the strongest bonds. I will never 10 that half-used eraser and the lesson it taught me.
