中考英语完形填空：实验课上的意外发现

完形填空原文

In our science class last week, we did an experiment about plants. Each group was given a bean seed and a small pot. We were told to plant the seed, water it every day, and 1 its growth. I thought it would be boring, but I was wrong.

My partner and I 2 our seed carefully. We put it in the soil, gave it enough water, and placed the pot by the window where it could get sunlight. For the first few days, nothing seemed to happen. I almost 3 that we had done something wrong.

Then one morning, I noticed a tiny green 4 pushing through the soil. I was so excited that I called my partner over. We watched it every day. The stem grew taller, and small leaves began to 5. It was amazing to see how a small seed could turn into a living plant.

Our teacher said that every scientist had to learn 6. "You cannot hurry nature," she told us. "Some things need time to grow." Her words stayed with me. I realized that learning was like growing a plant. We needed to be 7 and keep trying, even when we didn't see results immediately.

That simple experiment taught me more than any textbook. I learned to 8 the small changes in life. I learned that 9 and care could bring about beautiful results. Most importantly, I learned that the best discoveries often come from 10 the ordinary things around us with curiosity.
