中考英语完形填空：文具店的老店主

完形填空原文

There is a small stationery shop near our school. An old man runs it. He has white hair and always wears a kind smile. Every time I go there to buy pens or notebooks, he 1 me by my name. "Back again, Xiao Ming?" he says. I feel 2 when I hear that. It's nice to be remembered.

Last month, I lost my wallet on the way to school. I had no money for lunch. I walked past the shop and the old man 3 me. "You look worried today," he said. I told him what happened. Without saying much, he handed me twenty yuan. "Take it. You can 4 me back tomorrow." I was surprised. He trusted me even though we didn't know each other well. The next day, I returned the money. He just nodded and said, "I knew you would 5."

That day I learned something important. Trust is not about papers or promises. It's about choosing to 6 in people. The old man's shop is small. The shelves are old. But his kindness makes it a 7 place. Many students like to visit it, not only for school things, but also for the warm feeling.

I once asked him why he remembered so many students' names. He smiled and said, "Every student is 8. When I remember your name, you feel that you matter." Those words stayed with me. Now I try to remember people's names too. It's a small thing, but it can make someone's day 9.

The old man will probably keep his shop for many more years. I hope I can still visit him when I 10 from high school. That little shop and the old man's smile — they are part of my best memories of middle school.
