中考英语完形填空：社区图书馆

完形填空原文

There is a small library in our community. It is not as big as the city library, but it is a very 1 place for everyone in the neighbourhood. My grandmother often takes me there on weekends.

The library has three rooms. The first room is for children. It has colourful bookshelves, soft cushions on the floor, and a reading corner with a big bear toy. Little kids love to sit there and 2 picture books. The second room is the main reading room for adults. It is always very quiet because people go there to study or read newspapers. The third room is a 3 room where the library holds different events, such as story-telling hours and book clubs.

Last Saturday, something special happened. The library invited a local writer to give a 4. His name was Mr Chen. He wrote children's stories and was quite famous in our city. When he arrived, the room was already full of people. He told us how he 5 writing stories. "When I was a boy, I loved reading," he said. "One day, I thought, 'Why not write my own stories?' So I picked up a pen and started." His words were simple but very 6.

After his talk, we could ask him questions. A girl asked him what the most 7 part of writing was. He said, "Starting is easy. The hard part is not giving up when things get difficult." I thought about this carefully. His advice could be used not only in writing but also in 8 — in studying, in sports, in anything we do.

Before we left, Mr Chen signed books for us. I 9 got his signature on my favourite story book. It was a wonderful afternoon. The library is more than just a place to borrow books. It is a place where people come together, learn new things, and feel 10 to a community.
