中考英语完形填空：母亲的手

完形填空原文

One evening, Xiao Ming was doing his homework at the kitchen table. His mother sat beside him, peeling potatoes for dinner. He 1 looked up and saw her hands — they were red and rough, with several small cuts on the fingers.

"Mom, what happened to your hands?" he asked with 2. His mother smiled and said softly, "It's nothing. I've been washing clothes and cleaning all day." Xiao Ming suddenly felt a pain in his 3. He remembered that his mother woke up at five every morning to prepare breakfast, then went to work at a 4, and came home to cook and do housework.

He thought about his own hands — smooth and clean, never doing any 5 work. He felt ashamed. "Mom, let me help you," he said, reaching for a potato. His mother was 6 at first. "You should focus on your studies," she said. But Xiao Ming 7 and started peeling carefully.

As they worked side by side, Xiao Ming asked his mother about her day. She told him funny stories about her 8 at work, and they both laughed. It was the happiest evening they had had in a long time.

From that day on, Xiao Ming made a 9: he would help with housework every evening. It wasn't much, but it made his mother's life a little easier. He also began to truly appreciate everything she did for the family.

Years later, whenever Xiao Ming looked at his own hands, he always 10 his mother's rough but warm hands — the hands that had given him everything.
