中考英语完形填空：旧自行车的旅程

完形填空原文

In the corner of the garage, there was an old bicycle covered in dust and rust. It had belonged to Liang Hao's older brother, who had gone to college in another city two years ago. Nobody had 1 it since then.

One Saturday, Liang Hao's father suggested they fix the bicycle together. "Your brother 2 this bike to school every day for three years. It carried him through rain and sunshine. Now it's your turn," his father said.

Liang Hao looked at the rusty bicycle and felt 3. It was ugly and old. He wanted a new one, not this piece of junk. But his father had already started working, so Liang Hao 4 joined in.

They spent the whole afternoon cleaning, oiling, and 5 broken parts. His father showed him how to tighten the chain and adjust the brakes. As they worked, his father told stories about Liang Hao's brother — how he had once ridden this bike thirty kilometers to 6 a sick friend in the hospital, and how he had never been late to school, even during the coldest winter mornings.

By evening, the bicycle looked completely 7. The frame was shiny, the tires were firm, and the bell rang clearly. Liang Hao sat on it and rode around the yard. It felt smooth and 8.

"See?" his father said. "Old things aren't useless. They just need someone to 9 them again."

The next Monday, Liang Hao rode the bicycle to school. Some classmates noticed it was old, but Liang Hao didn't mind at all. He knew that this bike carried more than just him — it carried his brother's 10, his father's love, and a lesson about giving old things new life.
