中考英语完形填空：修补的风筝

完形填空原文

Li Ming loved playing football in the open field near his home. One afternoon, he kicked the ball too hard and it flew over the fence into his neighbor Grandma Chen's yard. It landed right on her beautiful handmade kite, 1 its delicate paper wings.

Li Ming stood frozen. He knew Grandma Chen had spent weeks making that kite. She 2 it every spring at the park, and the neighborhood children always gathered to watch. Now, because of his carelessness, it was 3.

His first thought was to run away and 4 it never happened. Nobody had seen him. But as he turned to leave, he heard his father's voice in his head: "A real man faces his 5."

Li Ming took a deep breath, climbed over the fence, and knocked on Grandma Chen's door. When she opened it, he held up the broken kite and said, "I'm very sorry, Grandma Chen. My ball hit your kite. I'll find a way to 6 it."

Grandma Chen looked at the kite and sighed. But she wasn't angry. "Accidents happen," she said kindly. "But I'm glad you had the courage to tell me the 7. Come inside — let's fix it together."

For the next two hours, Grandma Chen 8 taught Li Ming how to cut new paper, glue it onto the bamboo frame, and paint colorful patterns. Li Ming was clumsy at first, but Grandma Chen was very 9. Step by step, the kite came back to life.

When they finished, the kite looked even better than before. Grandma Chen smiled and said, "You see? Things that are broken can often be repaired. And sometimes, they become even more 10 because of the effort we put into fixing them."

Li Ming walked home that day carrying more than a repaired kite — he carried a lesson he would never forget.
