中考英语完形填空：一碗面的温度

完形填空原文

It was a cold winter evening. Fourteen-year-old Zhou Xuan was walking home from school when she realized her wallet was 1. She had left it in the classroom. The school gate was already locked, and she had no money to take the bus. Worse still, she hadn't eaten anything since 2.

Hungry and cold, she walked past a small noodle shop. The warm light and the delicious 3 made her stomach growl. She stood outside the door, looking through the glass with longing eyes.

The shop owner, a middle-aged woman, noticed her and came out. "Are you okay, child?" she asked. Zhou Xuan felt 4 and lowered her head. "I lost my wallet. I don't have any money," she said in a small voice.

Without hesitation, the woman 5 her inside. "Sit down. I'll make you a bowl of noodles. You can pay me back 6 — or not at all." Minutes later, a steaming bowl of noodles was placed in front of Zhou Xuan. She picked up the chopsticks and took the first bite. The warm noodles 7 through her body like sunshine.

Tears filled her eyes. She looked up and said, "You're so kind. You don't even 8 me, but you helped me."

The woman sat down across from her and smiled. "When I was young, a stranger once helped me in the same way. I've never forgotten that. Kindness doesn't 9 to you — it's meant to be passed along."

Zhou Xuan finished every drop of the soup. She thanked the woman and promised to come back to pay. But more importantly, she left the shop carrying a warm 10 in her heart — one that she would pass on to others for the rest of her life.
