But his grandma insisted he wear it, saying it would keep him 2. "Grandma, it's so ugly," he complained. Grandma just smiled and patted his head without saying a 3.

One Tuesday morning, Li Ming secretly left the sweater at home. He put on his thin, cool jacket and went to school 4. However, by lunchtime, the weather suddenly changed. The sky turned dark, and a strong, freezing wind began to blow. Li Ming started to 5 in his thin jacket. He was so cold that he couldn't even hold his pen properly during the afternoon classes.

When the final bell rang, Li Ming walked out of the school gate, wrapping his arms around himself. Suddenly, he heard a 6 voice calling his name. He looked up and saw his grandma standing in the cold wind. Her face was red, and her hands were 7, but she was holding a plastic bag tightly.

She quickly took out the red sweater and helped Li Ming put it on. "I knew the weather would turn bad, so I 8 it to you," she said, breathing heavily. Putting on the sweater, Li Ming felt a rush of warmth covering his whole body — not just from the wool, but from his grandma's deep 9. He looked at the sweater. It was no longer ugly; it was the most beautiful piece of clothing he had ever seen.
