03-27 第2篇

Grandpa's Garden

①When I was young, I didn't understand why my grandpa spent so much time in his small garden behind the house. Every morning, he woke up before sunrise, put on his old hat, and walked outside to check on his vegetables. "Come with me, Lily," he always said. But I preferred to stay inside and watch TV.

②One summer, my parents sent me to stay with my grandparents for a whole month. I was bored because there was no Internet and no friends nearby. On the third day, Grandpa handed me a small bag of seeds. "These are tomato seeds," he said with a warm smile. "Would you like to plant them yourself?" I had nothing else to do, so I said yes.

③Grandpa taught me how to dig small holes, put the seeds in, and cover them gently with soil. He showed me how to water them — not too much and not too little. "Plants are like children," he said. "They need the right amount of care and plenty of patience." Every morning after that, I followed Grandpa to the garden. I watered my tomato plants and watched them carefully, but nothing seemed to happen for days.

④"Grandpa, why aren't they growing?" I asked after a week. He laughed softly and said, "They are growing, Lily. You just can't see it yet. The roots are reaching down into the earth, getting ready to push up. Good things take time." I didn't fully believe him, but I kept watering them every day.

⑤About two weeks later, tiny green leaves broke through the soil. I was so excited that I ran into the house shouting, "They're growing! They're really growing!" Grandpa nodded and said, "You see? Your patience paid off." Over the following weeks, the plants grew taller and taller. By the end of the month, small green tomatoes appeared on the branches. I couldn't stop smiling.

⑥That summer changed me. I learned that some of the best things in life don't come quickly — they need time, care, and patience. Now, years later, I have my own small garden at home. Every time I work in it, I think of Grandpa and his gentle voice saying, "Good things take time."
