04-01 第2篇

阅读理解（记叙文）

① Last Friday evening, our school held a talent show in the main hall. Many students came to watch it. I was one of the performers (表演者). I decided to play a quiet piano piece for everyone.

② When it was my turn, I felt very nervous. My hands were shaking (发抖). I walked onto the stage slowly. My heart beat fast. What if I played the wrong notes? What if people laughed at me? Then I saw my best friend, Lily, sitting in the front row. She smiled at me and gave me a "thumbs up" (竖起大拇指).

③ Seeing her smile, I took a deep breath (深呼吸) and began to play. I closed my eyes, and the music flowed from my fingers. I forgot my nervousness and put all my feelings into the music. When I finished the last note, the hall was quiet for a second, and then everyone cheered and clapped warmly.

④ It was an unforgettable night. Although I didn't win the first prize, I won something more important — confidence (自信) and a great memory. I realized that the courage to stand on a stage is the real success.

注释： performer 表演者；shake 发抖；stage 舞台
