05-08 第2篇

阅读理解（记叙文）

① In a busy city, there was a small bakery (面包店) owned by Mrs. Higgins. She baked the most delicious bread in the neighborhood. Every morning, the sweet smell of fresh bread floated down the street, waking everyone up with a smile. However, Mrs. Higgins had one strict rule: whatever was not sold by the end of the day was to be thrown away. "Stale (不新鲜的) bread ruins my good name," she always said.

⑤ "Wait!" Mrs. Higgins called out suddenly. She looked at the bag in her hand, then at the freezing boy. For the first time, she realized that her pride in her "good name" was less important than a child's hunger.

⑥ She put the bag of old bread down. Instead, she walked to the glass counter, took out two freshly baked, warm meat pies, and handed them to Tim. "Tell your mother these are fresh from Mrs. Higgins," she said gently. "And come back tomorrow morning. I need a smart boy to help me sweep the floor before school, and the pay is a hot breakfast."

⑦ Tim smiled brightly, holding the warm pies like a treasure. From that evening on, fewer bags of bread ended up in the rubbish bin, and Mrs. Higgins' bakery became known not just for the best bread, but for the kindest heart.
