中考英语完形填空：在书店遇见有趣的人

完形填空原文

One afternoon during winter vacation, I went to a small bookstore near my home. It was a quiet place with wooden shelves and the 1 of old books. I loved spending time there because it always felt like a different world.

I was looking for a science fiction novel when I noticed an old man sitting in the corner. He was reading a thick book and making notes in a small 2. He looked very focused, as if nothing else in the world existed. I was curious about what he was reading, so I walked closer.

"Excuse me, sir. What book are you reading?" I asked 3. He looked up and smiled. "It's a book about the history of space exploration," he said. "I've been 4 in space since I was your age."

We started talking, and I learned that the old man was a retired science teacher. He had spent forty years teaching physics at a middle school. 5 he was retired, he still came to the bookstore every day to read and learn new things. "Learning never 6," he said. "There's always something new to discover."

He recommended several books to me and wrote down the titles on a piece of paper. One of them was about a young astronaut's journey to Mars. "This one will change the way you 7 about the universe," he said with bright eyes.

Before I left, he gave me a piece of 8: "Read as much as you can while you're young. Books are the best teachers you'll ever have." I thanked him and promised to come back next week.

Walking home with two new books in my bag, I felt 9. A simple visit to the bookstore had turned into an unforgettable meeting. I realized that interesting people can be found in the most 10 places—you just need to keep your eyes and mind open.
