05-26 第2篇

阅读理解（记叙文）

① Every Saturday afternoon, ten-year-old Li Wei would visit his grandfather. Grandpa Li lived in a small house with a wooden table in the yard. Under the old tree, they would sit together. Grandpa would take out a chessboard and say with a smile, "Ready for another lesson, Wei Wei?"

② Li Wei did not know how to play Chinese chess at first. Grandpa taught him one piece at a time. "This is the general. He must stay in his palace. This is the chariot — it moves in straight lines." Grandpa's voice was patient and kind. When Li Wei made a wrong move, Grandpa never got angry. He would nod and say, "Think again. What would happen if you move here?" Little by little, Li Wei began to understand the game.

③ Sometimes Li Wei would lose many times in a row. He felt frustrated and wanted to give up. "I'm no good at this," he said. Grandpa put his hand on Li Wei's shoulder. "When I was your age, I lost to my grandfather every time. Losing teaches you more than winning. The important thing is that we are here, playing together." Those words made Li Wei feel warm inside. He picked up a piece and tried again.

④ As months passed, Li Wei grew better at chess. But he noticed something — Grandpa seemed to make more mistakes. Once, Grandpa moved his general into danger without thinking. Li Wei won that game. Later, his mother told him, "Your grandfather has been playing chess for fifty years. He did not make that mistake by accident." Li Wei understood. Grandpa was letting him win to encourage him. It was Grandpa's way of love.

⑤ Now Li Wei is a teenager. Grandpa is too old to play often. But when they meet, they still talk about those Saturday afternoons. "Those were the best times," Grandpa says. Li Wei agrees. It was never really about winning or losing. It was about sitting under the tree, learning from Grandpa, and feeling the warmth of family.

注释： chessboard 棋盘；chariot 车（象棋）；frustrated 沮丧的
