06–12 第2篇

阅读理解（议论文）

① Is homework good or bad for students? This question has been discussed for many years. Some people say homework helps students learn. Others believe it brings too much pressure. Let us look at both sides.

注释： concentrate 集中注意力；overloaded 负担过重的；burden 负担
