Learning Patience from a Flower

① Li Ming was always in a hurry. He wanted everything to happen at once. When he did his homework, he gave up quickly if a question was difficult. His teacher, Mr. Wang, noticed this. One day, he gave Li Ming a small packet of sunflower seeds (种子) and said, "Try to grow a flower. Come back and tell me what you learn."

② Li Ming did not know how to grow flowers. He asked his grandfather for help. His grandfather taught him to put the seeds in soft soil, water them a little every day, and put the pot in a sunny place. "But when will the flower appear?" Li Ming asked. "You have to wait," his grandfather said with a smile. "Flowers need time."

④ As the days passed, the plant grew taller and taller. Li Ming kept watering it and watching it carefully. One morning, he saw a yellow bud (花蕾). A few days later, the bud opened into a bright sunflower. Li Ming felt proud. He had never waited for something for so long before. "I understand now," he told Mr. Wang. "You cannot rush a flower. You have to be patient."

⑤ From that day on, Li Ming changed. When he met difficult questions, he did not give up easily. He would think quietly and try again. "Growing a flower taught me patience," he said. "And patience helps me in everything I do."
