A Surprise Card for Mrs. Chen

① Mrs. Chen has been our English teacher for two years. She is kind and patient. She always makes our lessons interesting and never gets angry when we make mistakes. Last month, she fell ill and had to stay at home for a week. The whole class missed her very much.

② One afternoon, our monitor Lily had an idea. "Let's make a surprise card for Mrs. Chen," she said. "We can write our wishes and draw pictures. When she comes back, we'll give it to her." Everyone agreed and we decided to do it during the lunch break.

③ The next day, we brought colorful paper, crayons, and markers to school. Each of us wrote a short message. Some wrote "Get well soon!" Some drew flowers and hearts. Tom, who is usually quiet, drew a big smiley face and wrote "Thank you for teaching us. We love you!" We worked together and finished the card in twenty minutes.

④ When Mrs. Chen returned to school on Monday, we gathered around her desk. Lily gave her the card and said, "This is from all of us. We hope you feel better now." Mrs. Chen opened it slowly. Her eyes became wet. She said, "Thank you, everyone. This is the best gift I have ever received. I'm so lucky to have students like you."

⑤ That day, we learned something important. A small act of kindness can mean a lot to someone. Mrs. Chen smiled the whole lesson, and we knew our card had made her day. Sometimes the simplest things — like a handmade card — can bring the greatest joy.
