06-21 第2篇

阅读理解（记叙文）

① Learning to Be Independent on a School Camp

② Last summer, my class went on a three-day camping trip to the countryside. I had never slept away from home before, and I was both excited and nervous. My mother packed everything for me — clothes, a toothbrush, and even a small bag of snacks. "Don't worry," she said. "You will be fine."

③ On the first night, I realized I had forgotten to bring a flashlight. It was dark outside, and I could not find my way to the toilet. I had to ask a classmate for help. I felt a little embarrassed. That night, I promised myself I would try to do things on my own. The next morning, I woke up early and folded my sleeping bag by myself. I also helped our teacher cook breakfast over the fire. It was hard at first, but I felt proud when I finished.

④ By the third day, I had learned to pack my own bag, tie my shoes properly, and even help other students who were having trouble. When we returned home, my mother was surprised. "You look different," she said. "You seem more confident." I told her about the flashlight, the breakfast, and the new friends I had made. She smiled and said, "Sometimes we learn more outside the classroom than inside it."
