Learning to Ride a Bike

① When I was eight years old, all my friends could ride a bike. I was the only one who could not. Every time they rode around the neighbourhood, I had to run behind them. I felt left out and embarrassed.

② One Saturday, my dad said, "It's time to learn." He took out an old blue bike from the garage and pushed it to the park near our house. I looked at it and felt scared. "What if I fall?" I asked. "You will fall," Dad said with a smile. "But you will also get up."

③ Dad held the back of the seat while I climbed on. I held the handlebars so tightly that my fingers turned white. He pushed me forward gently. "Keep pedalling! Don't look down — look ahead!" he shouted. For the first few tries, I wobbled and fell. My knees got scraped and dirty. I wanted to cry, but Dad kept saying, "One more try."

④ After about an hour, something magical happened. I was pedalling, and suddenly I realised Dad was no longer holding the seat. I was riding on my own! The wind blew through my hair. The world seemed to open up. I was so excited that I shouted, "I'm doing it! I'm doing it!" Then I forgot to brake and crashed into a bush. But I was laughing, not crying.

⑤ That day I learned two things: how to ride a bike, and how to face fear. Sometimes the hardest part is just getting on and trying. Now, whenever I face something difficult, I remember that old blue bike and my dad's voice: "One more try."

注释： wobble 摇晃；scrape 擦伤；brake 刹车
