中考英语完形填空：学做木板烙画

完形填空原文

Last Sunday, I went to a craft workshop to learn pyrography—the art of drawing on wood with a hot tool. The instructor said this traditional skill has a long history in China. I was curious and wanted to try it by 1.

First, we chose a piece of smooth wood. The instructor said the wood must be dry and clean. We practiced on small pieces before working on our real project. The tool looked like a pen but had a hot tip. We had to be very 2 because it could burn our fingers if we touched it carelessly.

I decided to draw a simple bamboo pattern. I held the tool gently and moved it slowly across the wood. At first, my lines were 3 and uneven. The instructor encouraged me to practice more. She said the key was to control the temperature and the 4 of the pen.

After about an hour of practice, my skills improved. The lines became smoother and I could create different shades by changing the pressure. I felt 5 when I saw my bamboo drawing taking shape. When I finished, I carefully wiped the wood with a cloth to remove any dust. The final work looked quite nice—not perfect, but it was 6 my own creation.

I took my pyrography work home and put it on my desk. My parents said it was a unique art form and they had never seen 7 like it before. Making pyrography taught me that patience and practice can help us master new skills. I plan to make more pieces and maybe give one to my best friend as a 8. This traditional art connects the past with the 9, and I am glad to be part of keeping it 10.
