04-11 第二篇

The Art of a Good Apology

We all make mistakes—saying something unkind, forgetting a promise, or hurting someone's feelings. When we do, a simple "sorry" is often not enough. [1] A real apology is more than just a word; it is a clear way to show that you understand what went wrong and that you care about repairing the relationship. Learning to apologize well can help you keep friendships strong and build trust with others.

What makes an apology effective? First, you need to take responsibility. [2] Instead of saying "I'm sorry if you felt hurt," say "I'm sorry that I said those words—they were wrong." When you use "if," it can sound like you are not sure you did anything wrong. Taking full responsibility shows the other person that you are serious about making things right. It also shows that you are willing to admit your mistake without excuses.

Second, show that you understand the impact of your actions. [3] You might say something like, "I know that what I did made you feel ignored, and I regret that." This lets the person know that you have thought about how your behavior affected them. It is not enough to say "I'm sorry" and move on—you need to show that you really see things from their point of view. Empathy makes an apology feel genuine.

Third, offer to make amends when possible. [4] If you broke a promise, you could offer to make up for it in a specific way. If you hurt someone's feelings, you could ask what you can do to help them feel better. Sometimes a simple promise to try not to repeat the mistake is enough. The key is to show that you are committed to change, not just saying empty words.

[5] A good apology can turn a moment of conflict into a chance to grow closer. It takes courage to admit when we are wrong, but the result—a restored relationship—is worth it. Practice these steps the next time you need to say you are sorry, and you may find that your connections with others become stronger.

选项

A. In the end, apologizing well is a skill that strengthens relationships. B. For example, avoid using the word "if" when you express regret. C. It requires you to acknowledge what you did wrong without blaming others. D. Research shows that people who apologize sincerely are more likely to be trusted. E. The goal is to show that you are ready to take action, not just talk. F. In other words, put yourself in their shoes and name the hurt you caused.

答案键（Answer Key）

[1] C [2] B [3] F [4] E [5] A

深度解析

- [1] C：
  - 线索：概念深化与机制说明。空前指出"a simple 'sorry' is often not enough"，空后展开"A real apology is more than just a word...show that you understand what went wrong...care about repairing the relationship"。C选项"It requires you to acknowledge what you did wrong without blaming others"（它要求你承认自己的错误而不归咎于他人）中"It"指代"real apology"，"acknowledge what you did wrong"与空后"understand what went wrong"呼应，"without blaming others"与"care about repairing"形成对比，自然引出下文"take responsibility"等具体步骤。
- [2] B：
  - 线索：具体方法举例。空前提出"First, you need to take responsibility"，空后具体对比"Instead of saying 'I'm sorry if you felt hurt,' say 'I'm sorry that I said those words'...When you use 'if'...Taking full responsibility"。B选项"For example, avoid using the word 'if' when you express regret"（例如，表达歉意时避免使用"如果"一词）中"For example"引出例证，"avoid using 'if'"与空后"'I'm sorry if you felt hurt'...When you use 'if'"完美对应，直接说明"take responsibility"的具体做法，逻辑紧密。
- [3] F：
  - 线索：共情表达与具体展开。空前指出"show that you understand the impact of your actions"，空后举例"You might say something like, 'I know that what I did made you feel ignored'...show that you really see things from their point of view. Empathy"。F选项"In other words, put yourself in their shoes and name the hurt you caused"（换句话说，设身处地为对方着想并说出你造成的伤害）中"In other words"重述前文，"put yourself in their shoes"与"see things from their point of view"同义，"name the hurt you caused"与"made you feel ignored...regret that"对应，衔接自然。
- [4] E：
  - 线索：补救行动与总结过渡。空前提出"offer to make amends when possible"，空后举例"If you broke a promise...offer to make up for it...If you hurt someone's feelings...ask what you can do...promise to try not to repeat...committed to change, not just saying empty words"。E选项"The goal is to show that you are ready to take action, not just talk"（目的是表明你准备

好采取行动，而不只是说说而已）中"ready to take action"与空后"offer to make up...ask what you can do...promise...committed to change"呼应，"not just talk"与"not just saying empty words"完美对应，概括本段核心，逻辑顺畅。

- [5] A：
  - 线索：全文收束与升华。空[5]位于结尾段段首，空后"A good apology can turn a moment of conflict into a chance to grow closer...takes courage...restored relationship...connections with others become stronger"。A选项"In the end, apologizing well is a skill that strengthens relationships"（总之，善于道歉是一种能强化关系的技能）用"In the end"总结，"strengthens relationships"与空后"grow closer...restored relationship...connections become stronger"完美呼应，升华得当。
- 干扰项分析：
  - D. Research shows that people who apologize sincerely are more likely to be trusted.：提及研究及真诚道歉与信任的关系，与主题相关，易被误填[1]或[5]。但空[1]空前为"a simple 'sorry' is often not enough"，空后需解释"什么是真正的道歉"及其意义，C的"acknowledge what you did wrong without blaming"直接界定；D若填[1]则引入"研究"过于突兀，且前文未铺垫"trust"话题。空[5]需总结全文并升华，A的"skill that strengthens relationships"与空后"grow closer...restored relationship"直接对应；D侧重"trust"与"research"，与收束段"courage...worth it...practice"的号召语气不符。属"主题相关但衔接不当"型干扰。