04-27 第二篇

Social Media Literacy: Being Smart Online

Social media has changed how we connect, share, and learn. We use it to chat with friends, watch videos, and follow news from around the world. [1] However, not everything we see online is true or helpful. Fake news, advertisements（广告） that look like real posts, and unhealthy comparisons can affect our mood and choices. That is why learning to use social media wisely—called "social media literacy（素养）"—has become an important skill for people of all ages, especially teenagers.

What does it mean to be media literate? [2] It means asking questions before believing what we read or see. When you see a surprising post, ask yourself: Who made this? Why might they have shared it? Is there evidence（证据） to support the claim? Checking the source and comparing different reports can help us separate facts from opinions. In this way, we become more careful and thoughtful users instead of passive（被动的） consumers.

Social media can also influence how we feel about ourselves. [3] Many people only post their best moments—wins, trips, and happy photos—while hiding their struggles. This can make others feel that their own lives are not good enough. Being media literate helps us understand that what we see is often an edited（编辑过的） version of reality. We can enjoy others' posts without letting them damage our self-confidence（自信心） or make us feel less worthy.

How much time we spend on social media matters too. [4] Endless scrolling（滚动） can take away time from homework, exercise, and face-to-face conversation. Some studies suggest that too much screen time may affect sleep and mental health. Setting limits—for example, turning off notifications（通知） after a certain hour or choosing "screen-free" times—can help us stay in control. The goal is to use social media as a tool, not let it control us.

[5] In summary, social media literacy is not about avoiding the Internet but about using it with awareness and purpose. When we think critically, protect our well-being, and balance our online and offline lives, we can enjoy the benefits of social media while avoiding its pitfalls（陷阱）.

选项

A. That is why it is important to set healthy boundaries and manage our screen time. B. In other words, we need to develop the habit of thinking before we trust. C. In short, being smart online means being informed, balanced, and in control. D. The problem is that much of the content we see is designed to catch our attention, not necessarily to inform us. E. As a result, we often compare our full lives to others' highlight reels. F. Social media companies are constantly updating their apps to keep users engaged.

答案键（Answer Key）

[1] D [2] B [3] E [4] A [5] C

深度解析

- [1] D：
  - 线索：引出社交媒体上的内容问题与素养必要性。空前描述"Social media has changed how we connect...We use it to chat...watch videos...follow news"，空后说明"However, not everything we see online is true or helpful. Fake news...advertisements that look like real posts...unhealthy comparisons can affect our mood and choices...learning to use social media wisely...has become an important skill"。D选项"The problem is that much of the content we see is designed to catch our attention, not necessarily to inform us"（问题在于我们看到的许多内容旨在吸引注意力，未必是为了提供信息）中"The problem"承接空前使用场景，引出"内容不可靠"这一问题，与空后"not everything is true or helpful...fake news...advertisements"形成自然过渡，衔接顺畅。
- [2] B：
  - 线索：媒体素养的核心——质疑与求证。空前提问"What does it mean to be media literate?"，空后详述"It means asking questions before believing...Who made this? Why?...Is there evidence?...Checking the source and comparing...separate facts from opinions...more careful and thoughtful users instead of passive consumers"。B选项"In other words, we need to develop the habit of thinking before we trust"（换言之，我们需要养成在相信之前先思考的习惯）中"In other words"承接空前的"media literate"定义，"thinking before we trust"与空后"asking questions before believing...Checking the source"完美对应，逻辑紧密。
- [3] E：
  - 线索：社交媒体对自我认知的负面影响与认知调节。空前说明"Social media can also influence how we feel about ourselves"，空后列举"Many people only post their best moments...while hiding their struggles...This can make others feel that their own lives are not good enough...what we see is often an edited version of reality"。E选项"As a result, we often compare our full lives to others' highlight reels"（因此，我们常常将自己的完整生活与他人的精彩片段相比较）中"As a result"承接空前"influence how we feel"，"compare our full lives to others' highlight reels"与空后"only post best moments...hiding struggles...feel not good enough"精准呼应，衔接自然。

- [4] A：
  - 线索：屏幕时间管理的重要性。空前说明"How much time we spend on social media matters too...Endless scrolling can take away time from homework, exercise, and face-to-face conversation...too much screen time may affect sleep and mental health...Setting limits...can help us stay in control"。A选项"That is why it is important to set healthy boundaries and manage our screen time"（因此设定健康边界并管理屏幕时间很重要）中"That is why"承接空前问题与危害，"set healthy boundaries and manage our screen time"与空后"Setting limits...stay in control"完美对应，衔接精准。
- [5] C：
  - 线索：全文收束与素养内涵总结。空[5]位于结尾段段首，空后列举"not about avoiding the Internet but about using it with awareness and purpose...think critically, protect our well-being, balance our online and offline lives...enjoy the benefits while avoiding its pitfalls"。C选项"In short, being smart online means being informed, balanced, and in control"（简言之，聪明上网意味着知情、平衡、有掌控感）用"In short"总结全文，"informed, balanced, and in control"与空后"awareness and purpose...think critically...balance...in control"形成升华，收束得当。
- 干扰项分析：
  - F. Social media companies are constantly updating their apps to keep users engaged.：强调平台方为留住用户而更新应用，易被误填[1]或[4]。但F从平台视角出发，与空[1]前后文聚焦"用户看到的内容真假、素养必要性"角度不同——空[1]需引出"内容不可靠"的问题，D的"content...designed to catch attention"更贴合；空[4]讨论用户自身的时间管理，F讨论平台策略，主语与主题错位。F属"相关但视角与逻辑衔接不足"型干扰。