中考英语完形填空：窗台上的花

完形填空原文

Class 8 was known as the noisiest and most difficult class in the school. The students often argued with each other, and the classroom was always 1. Nobody seemed to care about keeping it clean or pleasant.

One Monday morning, a girl named Qin Lan quietly placed a small pot of green plants on the windowsill. Nobody paid much 2 to it at first. But a week later, tiny white flowers began to bloom. The soft petals caught the sunlight and filled that corner of the room with a gentle 3.

Something small but important started to change. Students who sat near the window began to keep their 4 tidy so the flowers could get more sunlight. Then others followed. Within two weeks, the area around the windowsill was the cleanest part of the classroom.

Qin Lan 5 brought more plants — a pot of sunflowers, some lucky bamboo, and a small cactus. She watered them carefully every morning before class. Some students started 6 her, taking turns to water the plants during weekends.

The class teacher, Ms. Zhao, noticed the 7 and smiled. "I've never seen this classroom look so nice," she said. "These plants have done what I couldn't do with words alone."

By the end of the term, Class 8 had changed completely. The arguments became 8, and students started treating each other with more kindness. They even won the school's "Most Improved Class" 9.

At the award ceremony, a reporter asked Qin Lan why she had started growing plants in the classroom. She thought for a moment and said, "I believe that when you bring something 10 into a space, the space itself begins to change. I just wanted to add a little beauty to our classroom."
