中考英语完形填空：转学生的午餐

完形填空原文

A new student named Lily moved to our school last month. She was from a small town far away. On her first day, she sat alone at the 1 table in the corner of the dining hall. Nobody talked to her.

I noticed that Lily brought her own lunch every day — a simple box with rice and vegetables. While other students bought hamburgers and pizza, she quietly ate her homemade food. Some kids 2 at her lunch box and whispered to each other. Lily pretended not to notice, but I could see her face turn 3.

One Tuesday, I decided to sit with her. "Hi, I'm Zhang Wei. 4 if I sit here?" I asked. Lily looked surprised but nodded shyly. I opened my own lunch box — my mom had also packed rice and vegetables that day.

"Your lunch looks 5!" Lily said, her eyes lighting up. "My mom makes mine too."

We started 6 about our favorite dishes. She told me her mom's tomato and egg stir-fry was the best in the world. I laughed and said my mom's was better. We argued playfully, and for the first time, I saw Lily smile.

The next day, something 7 happened. Lily brought an extra small box. "I asked my mom to make some for you," she said, handing it to me. I opened it — it was the famous tomato and egg stir-fry. It was truly 8.

From that day on, we always sat together at lunch. Sometimes my mom packed extra food for Lily, and sometimes Lily's mom did the same for me. Other students started 9 us too. Soon, our lonely corner table became the most popular table in the dining hall.

It all started with a simple "hi." Sometimes, one small act of 10 can change everything.
