中考英语完形填空：流浪猫的家

完形填空原文

There was a thin, dirty cat that lived near our school gate. It had gray fur and one of its ears was torn. Most students walked 1 it without a second look. Some even threw stones at it to chase it away.

One rainy evening, I saw the cat hiding under a bench, shaking from the cold. Its eyes looked 2 and helpless. I felt sorry for it and shared half of my bread with it. The cat ate quickly, then looked up at me as if to say "thank you."

The next day, I told my classmate Xiao Li about the cat. "Let's help it," I said. Xiao Li agreed right away. We made a small 3 out of an old cardboard box and put it behind the school wall where nobody would bother it.

Every day after school, we brought food and water. 4, the cat began to trust us. It would come out when it heard our footsteps and rub its head against our legs. We named it Huihui because of its gray color.

One day, we 5 that Huihui was walking strangely. Its back leg seemed hurt. Xiao Li's mom worked at an animal hospital, so we carefully put Huihui in a box and took it there.

The doctor examined Huihui and said its leg had a small wound that needed 6. "The good news is that it will recover completely," she said. We were so 7.

While Huihui was recovering at the hospital, Xiao Li and I made posters and put them around the neighborhood: "A gentle gray cat looking for a 8 home." Within a few days, a kind old lady called us. She lived alone and wanted a companion.

We brought Huihui to her apartment. The moment the old lady picked Huihui up, the cat started purring loudly. It seemed to know it had finally found a 9 place to stay.

Walking home that evening, Xiao Li said, "We couldn't change the whole world for stray animals, but we changed the whole world for Huihui."

I smiled. She was absolutely 10. Sometimes, helping just one is enough.
