04-18 第1篇

中考英语完形填空：夏日的萤火虫

完形填空原文

Last summer, I spent a week at my grandparents' house in the countryside. The first night, Grandpa said to me, "Would you like to see something 1? Follow me."

We walked along a small path behind the house. The sky was dark, and the air was warm. Crickets sang in the grass. Then, as we turned a corner, I saw them — hundreds of tiny lights 2 in the darkness, like stars that had fallen to the earth.

"Fireflies!" I whispered. I had read about them in books but had never seen them in real life. In the city where I live, there are too many streetlights. Fireflies cannot 3 there anymore.

Grandpa and I sat down on the grass. He told me that when he was a boy, fireflies were everywhere in summer. "We used to catch them in jars and watch them glow," he said. "But we always 4 them free before going to bed. They belong to the night."

I watched the fireflies dance. Each one carried its own small light, blinking on and off. Sometimes they flew 5, as if playing a game. Other times they stayed still, resting on leaves. The sight was so beautiful that I forgot about my phone and all my worries.

"Fireflies only live for about two weeks as adults," Grandpa said. "They spend most of their lives as larvae, hiding in the soil. When they finally grow wings, they have just a short time to shine."

His words made me think. Maybe we are all a bit like fireflies. We wait and prepare for a long time, and when our moment comes, we must 6 it to shine. The fireflies didn't waste their light. They used every night to glow and dance.

Before we went back, I caught one firefly gently in my hands. I watched it blink — a tiny miracle of nature. Then I opened my hands and let it go. It flew back into the darkness, 7 its light with the others.

That night I lay in bed, thinking about what I had seen. The fireflies had taught me something: even the smallest light can 8 the darkness. We don't need to be big or powerful to make a difference. We just need to glow with what we have.

I hope to visit Grandpa again next summer. I want to see the fireflies once more — those tiny messengers of joy that turn ordinary summer nights into something magical. And I want to remember that life, like a firefly's light, is short but 9. We should use it well.

That week in the countryside changed me. I learned to notice the small wonders around us — the fireflies in the field, the stars in the sky, the smell of grass after rain. Beauty is everywhere if we only take the time to 10 it.
