中考英语完形填空：第一次骑自行车上学

完形填空原文

I turned thirteen last month, and my parents gave me a new bicycle as a birthday gift. I had learned to ride when I was ten, but I had never cycled to school. The road was busy, and my parents always said it was too 1.

But I really wanted to try. I asked my dad again and again. Finally, he agreed, but only if he could ride 2 me on the first day.

That morning, I got up early. I checked the tires, the brakes, and my helmet. Everything was ready. Dad and I set off together. The sun was just rising, and the air felt 3.

At first, I was nervous. Cars passed by quickly. My hands gripped the handlebars tightly. Dad rode beside me and said, "Take it easy. Stay on the right side. You'll be 4."

His words helped me relax. After ten minutes, I began to feel more confident. I enjoyed the wind in my face and the freedom of the ride.

We reached the school gate. Dad smiled and said, "You did it! Tomorrow you can try 5."

The next day, I rode alone. It was a little scary at first, but I remembered Dad's advice. I followed the traffic rules and arrived at school safely. My classmates were 6 when they heard I had cycled by myself.

"Wow, that's cool!" said Li Ming. "I wish I could do that too."

From then on, I cycled to school every day when the weather was fine. It became part of my 7. I felt healthier and more energetic. I also learned that trying new things might seem 8 at first, but with courage and practice, we can do more than we think.

My parents were proud of me. Dad said, "You've grown up. You're not a little kid anymore." That made me feel good. Riding to school was more than just a way to get there — it was a step toward 9.

Now I always tell my younger friends: don't be afraid to try. The first time might be hard, but every expert was once a 10.
