中考英语完形填空：雨后的彩虹

完形填空原文

I had failed the math exam. My parents were disappointed. My friends didn't say much. I felt like a loser. For several days, I stayed in my room and didn't want to talk to anyone. The world felt dark and 1.

One afternoon, a heavy rain started. I sat by the window and watched the drops hit the glass. The sky was gray. Everything looked sad, just like my mood.

The rain lasted for about an hour. Then it stopped. The clouds began to 2, and the sun came out. I looked up — and there it was. A rainbow stretched across the sky. Red, orange, yellow, green, blue, violet. So bright and so beautiful.

I ran outside. The air smelled fresh. The wet grass reflected the sunlight. I stood there, staring at the rainbow, and something inside me began to 3.

A rainbow appears only after rain. Without the storm, there would be no rainbow. Maybe my failure was like the rain. It was painful, but it could lead to something beautiful if I didn't 4.

I went back inside and took out my math book. I would try again. I would ask my teacher for help. I would practice more. The exam was over, but my 5 was not.

In the weeks that followed, I worked hard. I did extra exercises. I joined a study group. Slowly, my math improved. In the next exam, I got a much better 6. My parents were proud. I was proud too.

I often think about that rainbow. It taught me that hard times don't last forever. After every storm, there is a 7 of sunshine. We just need to wait, and to believe.

Now when I face difficulties, I remember that day. I tell myself: "This is my rain. My rainbow is coming." It helps me stay 8 and keep going.

Life is full of ups and downs. We cannot avoid the rain, but we can choose how we respond to it. We can hide in fear, or we can 9 the storm and look for the rainbow on the other side.

That rainbow in the sky was a gift. It didn't last long — maybe ten minutes. But the lesson it taught me will 10 forever.
