中考英语完形填空：图书馆管理员

完形填空原文

Our school library had a strict rule: no talking, no eating, and all books must be returned on time. The person who made sure everyone followed these rules was Mrs. Xu, the librarian. She was a small woman with glasses and a very serious 1.

Most students were a little afraid of her. She never smiled. If you returned a book even one day late, she would give you a long lecture about 2. If you talked too loudly, she would appear behind you like a ghost and say "Shhh!" in a voice that could freeze water.

I used to think Mrs. Xu simply didn't like students. But one winter afternoon, I 3 my mind completely.

It was raining hard that day, and I went to the library to wait for my mom to pick me up. I sat in a corner, 4 and wet. I had forgotten my jacket, and the library's heating wasn't working.

Mrs. Xu walked over. I expected her to tell me to stop dripping water on the floor. 5, she placed a warm cup of tea on my desk and draped a thick blanket over my shoulders.

"Drink this," she said quietly. "Your mom called. She'll be thirty minutes 6."

I was so surprised that I couldn't speak. She turned to walk away, then stopped. "You know," she said without looking back, "I'm strict because I 7 about this library and every student who comes here. A good library is like a quiet garden — it needs someone to take care of it so that 8 can grow."

After that day, I started seeing Mrs. Xu differently. I noticed that she always put bookmarks in new books with a tiny handwritten 9 that said "Happy reading!" I noticed that she stayed late every Friday to organize the shelves so students would find what they needed on Monday.

Mrs. Xu retired last month. At her farewell party, the library was packed with students — past and present. We all stood and clapped. There were tears in her eyes, and for the first time, I saw her 10.
