中考英语完形填空：暴风雨中的篮球赛

完形填空原文

The basketball finals were scheduled for Friday afternoon. Our team had practiced for months, and we were 1 to win. Nothing could stop us — or so we thought.

At noon, dark clouds rolled across the sky. By the time the game was supposed to start, rain was pouring down so hard that we could barely see the other end of the outdoor 2. The referee considered canceling the game.

"We can't cancel!" shouted our captain, Liu Wei. "We've worked too hard for this." The other team's captain 3, and eventually the referee agreed to let us play.

The first half was terrible. The ball was slippery, the ground was muddy, and every pass went 4. We fell behind by twelve points. During halftime, some of my teammates wanted to give up. "There's no way we can win in this weather," said Chen Hao, shaking his wet hair.

Liu Wei stood up. "Listen," he said, his voice 5 but firm. "The rain is the same for both teams. If we give up now, we'll regret it forever. Let's just play our best and see what happens."

Something changed after that. Maybe it was Liu Wei's words, or maybe it was the thought of all those months of 6. Either way, we went back onto the court with a different attitude.

In the second half, we played like a completely different team. We stopped worrying about the rain and started 7 on the game. Shot by shot, we closed the gap. With two minutes left, the score was tied.

Then, in the final thirty seconds, I got the ball near the three-point line. My shoes were full of water. My hands were 8. But I jumped, aimed, and released the ball. It flew through the rain in a perfect arc and went straight through the hoop.

The whistle blew. We had won by three points.

Our team screamed and hugged each other in the rain. Nobody cared about being wet anymore. We had 9 something more important than a trophy — we had proved to ourselves that we could overcome anything.

That game taught me a 10 I'll never forget: the biggest obstacles are not outside — they're in your head. And the moment you decide not to quit, you've already half won.
