中考英语完形填空：走廊尽头的座位

完形填空原文

When I transferred to a new school in Grade 8, I felt lost. The other students had known each other for years. They had their own groups. I ate lunch alone and sat by myself during breaks. The seat at the end of the corridor became my 1 — a quiet place where nobody would notice me.

One afternoon, I was reading there when I heard a voice. "Mind if I sit here?"

I looked up. It was a boy from my class. I had seen him before but never 2 to him. He always sat in the front and seemed confident. Why would he want to sit with me?

"Sure," I said, moving my bag.

He sat down and pulled out a sandwich. "I noticed you're always alone. I used to be the new kid too. It's not easy."

His words 3 me. I had thought nobody cared. We started talking. He told me about his first week at this school — how he had felt like an outsider until someone invited him to join a study group. "A small act of 4 can change everything," he said.

From that day on, we often met at the corridor seat. Sometimes we studied together. Sometimes we just talked. He introduced me to his friends. Slowly, I began to feel like I 5.

One day, I asked him why he had chosen to talk to me. "You looked like you needed a friend," he said. "And I remembered what it felt like to need one."

His answer made me realize something important. We often think we're alone in our 6, but we're not. Many people have been through similar experiences. The boy didn't do anything extraordinary — he just reached out. But that simple act 7 my whole school year.

Now I'm in Grade 9. I still sit at the corridor seat sometimes, but not because I'm lonely. I sit there to watch for other students who might need a friend. When I see someone sitting alone, I remember the boy who 8 me. I walk over and say, "Mind if I sit here?"

Kindness doesn't need to be loud or perfect. Sometimes it's just a seat shared in a quiet corridor, a few words of 9, or a simple question that says, "I see you. You're not invisible." The boy at the corridor seat taught me that. And now it's my turn to pass it on — one 10 at a time, one seat at a time.
