中考英语完形填空：暑期义工

完形填空原文

This summer, I joined a volunteer programme at the community centre. Every Tuesday and Thursday, I would go there to help. My main job was to help look after the children while their parents attended classes. I had never done this kind of work before, so I felt a little 1 at first.

On my first day, I met a girl named Xiaomei. She was about six years old and very shy. She did not want to leave her mother's side. I sat down next to her and asked if she liked to draw. She nodded. I gave her some paper and crayons. 2, she began to draw a picture of her family. As she drew, she became more relaxed and even started to talk to me. I felt happy that I could help her feel at ease.

Some days the work was tiring. There were many children and they all wanted attention. I had to read stories, play games, and help them with simple activities. But when I saw their smiling faces, all my 3 seemed to disappear. One boy named Tao Tao always made me laugh. He would pretend to be a superhero and run around the room. The children loved him.

One afternoon, a little girl fell and hurt her knee. She started to cry. I 4 her to the office and found a bandage. I cleaned the small cut and put the bandage on. "You are very brave," I told her. She stopped crying and gave me a small smile. That moment, I understood that being a volunteer was not just about having fun. It was about being there when someone needed 5.

By the end of the summer, I had made many new friends — both the children and the other volunteers. On my last day, Xiaomei gave me a drawing she had made. It showed the two of us holding hands. "Thank you for playing with me," she said. I was deeply 6. I realised that even small acts of kindness can make a big 7. I hope to continue volunteering in the future. Helping others has become something I truly 8. That summer taught me the real 9 of giving. I will always 10 those warm moments with the children.
