中考英语完形填空：社区义卖活动

完形填空原文

Last Saturday, our community held a charity sale to raise money for children in poor villages. Many families took part in the event. My mother and I got up early to prepare our stall.

We gathered things we no longer needed: old books, toys, clothes that were too small for me, and some handmade crafts. My mother also baked some cookies to 1. "Everything we sell will go to help those children," she said.

The sale started at nine o'clock in the community square. There were about thirty stalls, each with different items. Some sold second-hand clothes, some sold toys and games, and some sold home-made food. The atmosphere was lively and 2.

Our stall was near the entrance. A lot of people stopped to look at our items. A little girl bought a teddy bear that I had loved when I was younger. She hugged it tightly and said thank you. I felt 3 that my old toy would make another child happy.

Around noon, an elderly couple came to our stall. They bought several books and two boxes of cookies. The man said they wanted to support the good 4. Before they left, they gave us an extra fifty yuan as a donation. We were deeply moved.

By two o'clock in the afternoon, we had sold almost everything. We counted the money together. We had collected over eight hundred yuan from our stall 5. Together with other stalls, the event raised more than twenty thousand yuan for the charity.

I learned something important that day. Helping others does not always mean giving a lot of money. We could give things we no longer need, or we could give our 6. The cookies my mother baked took time and effort. The toys and books we donated had once been precious to us. Every small act of kindness 7.

Before we went home, the organiser thanked all the volunteers. She said that the success of the event depended on everyone's 8. I felt proud to be part of it. I hope we can have more events like this in our community.

My mother said we would take part in the next charity sale too. I have already started to collect things to 9 next time. I also want to learn how to bake so that I can contribute something delicious. Helping others makes me feel that I am doing something 10 with my life.
