中考英语完形填空：制定学习计划

完形填空原文

At the beginning of the new term, our teacher asked us to make a study plan. She said a good plan could help us use our time more 1 and achieve better results. I thought it was a great idea, so I sat down that evening to write mine.

First, I looked at my timetable. I had classes from Monday to Friday, and weekends were 2. I decided to divide my free time into study time and rest time. I knew that studying too much without breaks would make me tired, and I would not be able to 3 well.

For each subject, I set a specific goal. In maths, I wanted to finish all the exercises in the workbook. In English, I planned to memorise twenty new words every week and read one short article every day. For Chinese, I would practise writing one essay each week. These goals were not too easy or too 4 — they were just right for me.

I also made rules for myself. No playing mobile games during study time. No 5 homework until the last minute. And I had to review what I had learned in class on the same day. My father said that reviewing on time helps move knowledge from short-term memory to 6 memory. I believed him because he was a teacher himself.

The first week was the hardest. I was not used to following a strict schedule. Sometimes I wanted to watch TV or chat with friends online. But I 7 myself that the plan was for my own good. Slowly, studying according to the plan became a habit.

After one month, I could already see the 8. My test scores improved in almost every subject. I also felt less stressed because I did not have to rush to finish homework at the last minute. My teacher praised me in front of the class, which made me feel very 9.

Now I understand why planning is so important. It is like a map that guides you on a long journey. Without a map, you might get lost. With a good plan, you can reach your 10 step by step. I will keep following my study plan and adjust it when needed.
