中考英语完形填空：第一次英语课演讲

完形填空原文

Last week, our English teacher Ms. Liu announced that each student had to give a three-minute speech in class. When I heard this, my heart started beating 1. Public speaking was my biggest fear.

Ms. Liu gave us three days to prepare. She said we could talk about any topic we liked, as long as it was in English. I spent a long time thinking about what to say. 2, I decided to talk about my favourite book, "Charlotte's Web." I had read it many times and knew the story well.

I wrote my speech on a piece of paper and practised reading it aloud in my room. At first, my voice was shaky and I kept 3 words. But after practising for two hours, I could say the whole speech smoothly. My mother listened to me and gave some 4. She suggested I make more eye contact and speak more slowly.

The day of the speech arrived. I was the fifth student to present. As I watched my classmates go before me, some were confident and fluent, while others were as nervous as I was. When my turn came, I walked to the front of the class on 5 legs.

I took a deep breath and began. "Today I want to share a book that changed my life..." My voice trembled at first, but as I talked about the story, I gradually 6. I described how Charlotte, a small spider, saved her friend Wilbur through her wisdom and love. I could see my classmates listening 7. Some even nodded when I talked about the theme of friendship.

When I finished, there was a moment of silence. Then the class burst into applause. Ms. Liu smiled and said, "Well done! Your love for the book really 8 through." I returned to my seat feeling as if I were walking on air.

That experience taught me something important. The things we fear the most are often not as 9 as we imagine. We just need to prepare well and take the first step. Now I actually look forward to the next speech. I have already started thinking about what topic to 10.
