完形填空原文

Our head teacher announced that each class would create a culture wall in the hallway. The theme was "Our Dreams." She said it was a chance to show our class spirit and 1. Everyone was excited about the project.

We held a class meeting to plan the wall. Some students suggested drawing pictures, while others wanted to write poems or essays. After a long discussion, we decided to combine all these ideas into one 2 design. We would have a big tree in the centre, with each leaf carrying a student's dream.

I was put in charge of the art team. We had five days to complete the wall. On the first day, we bought coloured paper, markers, glue and scissors. Two students who were good at 3 drew a large tree trunk and branches on a big piece of brown paper. It looked very realistic.

Then each student wrote their dream on a leaf-shaped piece of paper. Some dreams were big — "I want to be a doctor" or "I want to travel the world." Others were more 4 — "I want to get an A in maths" or "I want to learn to cook." Every dream was valuable, no matter how big or small.

We 5 the leaves onto the branches one by one. The tree slowly came to life, full of green, yellow and orange leaves. Around the tree, we added photos of our class activities and short quotes about following your dreams. One student wrote a beautiful sentence: "A dream does not become reality through 6; it takes determination and hard work."

The most challenging part was making everything look 7. Some letters were too big while others were too small. Some photos were crooked. We had to redo several parts. But nobody complained — everyone wanted the wall to be perfect.

When the wall was finished, we stepped back and admired our work. It was 8. The tree was full of dreams, and the whole wall was colourful and inspiring. Our head teacher took photos and shared them in the parents' group chat. Many parents left positive 9.

The headmaster chose our wall as the best in the school. We won a small prize, but the real reward was the 10 we felt. Working together on the culture wall brought our class closer than ever.
