完形填空原文

Last weekend, my grandmother taught me how to make pumpkin cakes. It was my first time cooking, and I was both excited and 1.

First, we needed to prepare the ingredients. Grandma had already bought a pumpkin from the 2. We washed it, cut it into small pieces, and steamed it until it became soft. Then we used a spoon to mash the pumpkin into a paste.

Next, we 3 the pumpkin paste with flour, sugar, and a little salt. Grandma said we had to mix everything well, or the cakes would not taste good. I stirred with a big spoon while she added the flour 4. She told me to be patient and mix slowly.

When the dough was ready, we divided it into small balls. I learned to 5 each ball into a flat cake with my hands. Grandma's cakes were round and perfect, but mine were a bit 6. She smiled and said, "Don't worry. They will still taste delicious."

Then we heated some oil in a pan and fried the cakes. When they turned 7, we knew they were ready. The kitchen was full of a sweet 8. I couldn't wait to try one!

We put the pumpkin cakes on a plate and let them cool down a little. Grandma said we could eat them with honey 9 soy milk. I took a bite and it was wonderful! The outside was crispy and the inside was soft and sweet.

That afternoon, I not only learned to make pumpkin cakes but also learned that cooking takes time and practice. It was a 10 experience that I will never forget.
